To tax Spinsters.

Argentine Republic will not be the only place spinsters will have to fight shy of to avoid paying a tax for the privilege of remaining unmarried, if a bill recently presented to the Michigan Legislature is passed. The originator of the bill is not given in the account from which this was taken, and nothing further can be learned than that it provides that a tax shall be imposed on all spinsters, unless they can prove that single blessedness has been thrust upon them, that it is not the result of their own inclinations.

"The muscular power of insects is wonderful. It takes five thousand honey bees to weigh a pound. Yet, let a large fat man sitting on the grass, interfere with the honey industry, and one small, but healthy bee, will lift his 250 pounds in a quarter of a second."

The garden seed men are up in arms and are trying to work on the country press to suppress the habit congressmen and senators making annual donations of seeds to their farmers. We decline to enter into any such fight. Rather we favor congress making an appropriation to furnish the farmers with free reapers and mowers, and wagons and buggies and bicycles, and hens and roosters, and sheep and hogs, and everything else needed on the farm. Congress does not hesitate to rob the farmer to put money into the purses of trusts and syndicates and combines and corporations, and if he must be taxed so then he might as well get some of the benefit himself.—Cynthiana Democrat.

How to judge your Neighbors.

A leading divine recently told the following to illustrate how one might judge the character of their future neighbors when first moving into a new neighborhood: One day, as an old farmer sat in the front of his house, there drove up a traveler who said: "Stranger, I am going to settle in a new country, and as I journeyed along I heard that the town just over the hill was a fine place in which to live. What kind of people will my next door neighbors be?" "Well friend," asked the old farmer, "what kind of neighbors did thee leave in the place from whence thee came?" "Oh," said the man, "they were the meanest, most contemptible, most thievish set; every robber of them was sticking his fingers in your pocket." "Well," said the old farmer, "friend, thee will find them so in the next place." The following day, along the same road, drove a fat, happy, cheerful, contented-looking man, and asked the old farmer the same question. "What kind of neighbors did I leave?" said the man. "Oh, they were the most sympathetic, the most charitable, the most kind. In the ten long years they never spoke to me one cross word, but my daughter died, and somehow I couldn't live in the old home any longer, the place seemed so lonesome." "Well," said the old farmer, "friend, thee will find thy neighbors the same in the next town."

An Old Story retold.

Daniel Webster, Tazewell, and Gen. Jackson's Secretary of the Navy were once walking together on the north bank of the Potomac, and while Webster lingered a little in the rear, Tazewell offered to bet Branch a $10 hat that he could prove him to be on the other side of the river.

"Done," said Branch.

"Well," said Tazewell, pointing to the opposite shore, "isn't that one side of the river?"

"Yes."

"Well isn't this the other side?"

"Yes."

"Then as you are here, are you not on the other side?"

"Why, I declare," said the victim, "so it is; but here comes Webster, I'll win back my bet from him."

As Daniel came up, Branch saluted him with, "Webster, I'll bet you a $10 hat I can prove you're on the other side of the river."

"Done."

"Well, isn't that one side?"

"Yes."

"Well, isn't this the other side?"

"Yes, but I'm not on that side."

Branch had to pay for two hats and learned that it is possible to bet both ways and win upon neither.—Argonaut.

Experience

Teaches us much

The wise and prudent man profiteth by the experience of others. We have but one way to judge the future and that is by the past, and we should profit by our mistakes, and be guided by the lamp of experience. Experience teaches all that quick cash sales and small profits is the modern way of conducting a successful business. I do business in this way, which makes it to the buyers interest to see me when needing any thing in General Merchandise.

UNIQUE ANNOUNCEMENTS.

A Pennsylvania Editor Wants an Office and gives His Reasons.

"We"—Deemer Beidleman, if you please—are in it. Want the Democratic nomination for county commissioner, and will do all we can to get it. No time to bluff, and nothing mean to say about the other fellows. Why the desire? Because we believe we could fill the bill, and there's a good salary attached—we need the salary. Any man who has the gift and pluck to publish a Democratic paper in a town like Shickshinny, is deserving. (Cries of here, here, and continued applause from the gallery.) While we must confess there are those who say they are willing to bleed and die for the Jacksonian party, we will not. We simply want to draw breath and salary. (Huzzahs from the baldheaded row.) Modestly, however, it is the opinion of many that the editorial "we" should be organized for services rendered. The "we" thinks likewise. During the past four years the Democrat has been true to its party and cheerfully, unfalteringly supported its candidates. When they went down we went down with them. From our meager store the last crust was divided. Outside the newspaper efforts, every Democratic nominee will hear testimony of our readiness to accompany them through the district and county and in performing such other allotted work uncompromisingly, without any reimbursement. Then, too, there were the cold rooms, damp beds and cold lunch. Four year experience of this kind should fit a man for any thing. Let us have it. Many other things, wise and otherwise, might be said of us, but we modestly forbear, and leave that for our friends and enemies to discuss. In conclusion, we mean business. Thanks for your generous space and kind attention.—Shickshinny, Pa., Democrat.

DROWNED

While attempting to cross a swollen stream in Lee County.

A special from Beattyville on Wednesday, says W. A. Horton was drowned Tuesday evening in a creek near there on horseback. The water was ice cold and his horse took the cramps in midstream, the creek being swollen. Mr. Horton tried to swim out and was himself seized with cramps. He died before help could reach him, but his body was recovered. He was a prominent Wolf county stock trader and was buying stock in Lee county.

Wickensburg, Ara., Meh. 22.
J. E. Burgher, Editor Spotspring Times,

Dear Sir:—I will endeavor to pen you a few lines from my far western home, thinking perhaps I can write something that will be of interest to you and your many subscribers. I am sorry to say that the Times does not come to me regular but I suppose it is the fault of "Uncle Sam" instead of the Editor. The Times is small but I am lost without it. I anxiously await its arrival at Wickensburg, the small mining town where I receive my mail. Arizona is the country where I had heard that it hardly ever rained, but it seems to rain here without much effort this winter, but the old settlers say that it has been an unusual rainy winter. This is a great cattle country and the cattle men are jubilant over the prospect of good grazing in the summer. There has been some tremendous hard drouths here the last few years, and many cattle perished for want of water, which gets very scarce indeed in summer. There are many very rich gold, copper and silver mines in the Territory, notably: the Congress, Vulture, Globe and Little Jessie. The Vulture mine being about the oldest mine discovered in the Territory having been discovered 30 years ago by Henry Wickensburg, the founder of the town of Wickensburg. There has been millions of dollars in gold taken out of it, and it is still considered a gold mine. The soil in this country is very fertile and when irrigated grows large crops of vegetables or grain. Alfalfa is the chief crop, it yields abundantly growing three and four crops a year, it is good hay and sells for $15. per ton, so you see there is a good deal of money made in raising it. Oranges, lemons and figs grow here; in fact, nearly all kinds of tropical fruits are grown here, but still old Kentucky is good enough for me.

With kindest wishes for your continued success.

I am, yours truly,

"Rods Hood."

The Ashland News gets off the following on a mountain preacher: "A newly-ordained minister of Carter county, who was recently called upon to marry a certain couple, after managing to waddle through with most of the ceremony, wound up as follows: 'I charge you in the name of the laws of the State of Kentucky, and the laws as laid down by Moses and George Washington—five dollars for this ceremony. I am a free silver man, but I'll be carried if I will take any more coin skins on marriage fees.'"

At the wedding of the last, her sisters and their husbands were there, and the old man said: "I have taken pains to educate my daughters that they might act well their part in life and honor to my family. I find that all my pains, care and expectations have accomplished nothing but a Poor, Little, Short, Brown, Hogg."—Ex.

Pekin, Ill., has a sensation. A year ago a man named Wallace was hanged there for the murder of his sister. A week ago, when the warm rains fell the grass took on a green hue all over the Court-house square, and over the space where the stockade had stood, except over the spot occupied by the gallows, which is barren and presents the exact outline of a woman's face with hair streaming in disengagement down her back. It is said to be a splendid likeness of the murdered woman.—Ex.
